

NFI Changes in 2019

There are two important things to know if you plan to take a NFI exam at HPBExpo 2019:

1. There are significant changes to the Woodburning, Gas and Pellet NFI certification exams. Please pay very close attention to the following information.
2. Exams for the new Core material, as well as the Woodburning, Gas and Pellet exams will be an over-length exam at HPBExpo 2019. An over-length exam is created each time NFI introduces a new exam. After the first group of examinees take the exam, the NFI Exam Writing Committee meets to whittle down the questions to the final number and establish the passing score. Core, Gas, Pellet and Woodburning exams that are taken at HPBExpo 2019 will be scored in mid-April. Pass/fail notifications will be sent out as soon as possible after each Exam Writing Committee meets.

If you have any questions, please call the NFI office at 703-524-8030 or email us at info@nficertified.org.

Hearth Design Specialist

The new Hearth Design Specialist certification was introduced at HPBExpo 2018 to give the sales/planning personnel the education, credibility and recognition they deserve. The certification material covers the technical information a great sales person needs to know. The Hearth Design Specialist manual and exam will remain a standalone certification. It is NOT affected by the changes to the other three certifications. Study from the 1st Edition Hearth Design Specialist Reference Manual. This exam has 100 multiple choice questions.

Changes to Gas, Pellet and Woodburning Certifications

There is a core body of knowledge that everyone should know regardless of which fuel-type they are certified in. In an effort to reduce the redundancy, we have pulled that core material out and created a Core Reference Manual and exam. To get your first certification you need to pass the Core exam and one of the fuel-type exams (Woodburning, Gas or Pellet). Previously all our exams had 100 multiple choice questions. Under the new format, the Core exam will have 60 questions and the individual fuel-type exam will have 40 in each. Things get easier when you want to add a second or third certification. Since you have already passed the Core material, all you have to do is take the additional fuel-type exam.

NFI Reference Manuals

Woodburning, Gas and Pellet Reference Manuals have also been reformatted. There is a new manual for the Core material and a new version of the Woodburning, Gas and Pellet reference manuals. The Core Reference Manual is in the 1st Edition. Woodburning, Gas and Pellet are each in the 6th edition. Please be sure to study from the newest edition of the manual to properly prepare for the new NFI exams.

What about my Master Hearth Professional \(MHP\) status?

I want to get certified for the first time

1. I plan to take the exam at HPBExpo 2019 in Dallas

The Core, Woodburning, Gas and Pellet exams at HPBExpo 2019 will ALL be the over-length version. The over-length Core exam will be 80 questions. The over-length Woodburning, Gas and Pellet will each be 60 questions. Pass/Fail results from these exams will not be available until after the Exam Writing Committee meets in mid-April 2019.

The Hearth Design Specialist exam results will be available the day after you take the exam.

2. I plan to take the exam after HPBExpo 2019

Once the Exam Writing Committee meets in early April, the over-length Core, Woodburning, Gas and Pellet exams will all be finalized to their proper length. They will all be available at various industry events throughout the summer, at any of the PSI/LaserGrade test centers, or through our online exam service.

I am already currently certified in Woodburning, Gas or Pellet

1. Renew by CEUs

There are no changes to the program if you are currently certified and plan to renew your certification by Continuing Education Units (CEUs).

2. Renew by exam

Once the Exam Writing Committee meets, the final version of the exams will be available at various industry events and online. There is normally a 6-8 week delay before new exams are available at PSI/LaserGrade test centers.

3. You hold a current certification and want to add another certification

You do NOT have to take the Core exam since the exam you took for your current certification essentially contains the Core information. You simply have to take the exam for the fuel-type you want to add.

What happens to my expiration dates under the new program?

1. One certification

You are not “certified” until you pass both the Core exam and at least one of the fuel-type exams. Expiration dates for those that only hold one certification are based on the date you have successfully passed the Core exam and one of the fuel-type exams.

2. Multiple certifications

Whenever possible it is best to synchronize your expiration dates so all your certifications expire at the same time. The NFI staff works with each person individually to find a date somewhere in the middle of the person’s certification expiration dates.

Those who choose to renew their certifications by exam and do not synchronize their dates will have to watch their expiration dates very carefully. Each certification expires every three years. However, the Core exam will also have to be taken every three years. This will require very close contact with the NFI staff to make sure your certification remains active.

What about my Master Hearth Professional (MHP) status?

The Master Hearth Professional (MHP) is the person who holds a current Woodburning, Gas and Pellet certification. Any material covered in the Hearth Design Specialist certification is also contained in at least one of the three. Therefore you do not have to hold a Hearth Design Specialist certification to maintain your MHP status.
